

Martin Luther king junior the change

For the change and the hope

A man willing to rise higher than many others

As signs scream aloud

And people roar like tigers in the wild

For those who fight for what they believe in

For those too scared to have a voice

For the understanding and unifying all... as people

To do what many couldn't... to fight

His life on the line...

But for some anything is worth the price

People try and people do but at the end does it change anything?

We have come far from the beginning

But does anyone change at heart

As many believe color shouldn't change personality

Yet they blame those who are as harmless as a fly

And are supposed heroes fall so low to hurt those that are free

A speech

A dream

fight

A love

To change

The one who changes

The one who knows

The one who understands

The one willing to fall

To the king

To Martin Luther King
